

God's response to His apparent silence in history is manifested in the cross of Jesus, in the giving of love until the surrender of His life.

God is crucified in all the suffering people of the world, who are treated unjustly.

To accompany Jesus in the surrender of His life is not a pleasant walk on a quiet morning, it means accompanying the crucified of today, it means walking with the forgotten, the marginalized, the little ones of our world and it means working every day, so that the life of the sons and daughters of God may be more worthy.

Christ dies for all.

Dear friends of the ACI Family, dear Sisters,

Look at the face of Jesus, a frail face, because His love, made him know weakness. Love, which implies giving and giving again, makes you feel weak. The cross is not the answer to our sins, but it questions us and motivates us to open our hearts to another way of questioning, of knowing and of living. Today, from the cross, Jesus asks us what we have done with our life, with our interests, with our illusions, with ourselves, with our friends, with our families, with Him.

With friendship,
